

Sudha Murty was born on August 19, 1950, in Shiggaon, Haveri district, Karnataka, India, to Dr. R. H. Kulkarni and Vimala Kulkarni. She belongs to a Deshastha Madhwa Brahmin family. She graduated in Electrical and Electronics Engineering from B.V.B. College of Engineering & Technology (now known as KLE Technological University). She later completed her post-graduation in Computer Science from the Indian Institute of Science. She was awarded a gold medal by the then Chief Minister of Karnataka.

Career

Sudha Murty once wrote a postcard to the then Chairman of TELCO, expressing her concerns about gender bias in the company. As a result, she was called for an interview and was hired immediately, becoming the first female engineer at India's largest automobile manufacturer, Tata Engineering and Locomotive Company (TELCO). She was initially posted in Pune as a Development Engineer and was later transferred to Mumbai and Jamshedpur. She also worked with the Walchand Group of Industries in Pune as a Senior Systems Analyst.

In 1996, she established the Infosys Foundation and currently serves as its Chairperson. She is also a visiting professor at Bangalore University and was previously a professor at Christ University.

Under her leadership, the Infosys Foundation inaugurated two significant institutions: the H.R. Kadim Diwan Building at IIT Kanpur and the Narayan Rao Melgiri Memorial National Law Library at the National Law School of India University (NLSIU), Bengaluru.
